

A workshop on Participatory Video & Most Significant Change
for
RSPs Forum for Advancement of Communications Expertise (FACE)
by
White Rice Communications

Context

RSPN & White Rice Communications came together to conduct workshops on "Digital Storytelling", the purpose of which was to equip development professionals – essentially the focal persons of the Rural Support Programmes - working in the field with visual tools and skills to better document, share and amplify the impact their work is creating in the digital age. The participants went through a series of modules including writing, photography and in the process created photo stories as final products at the end of the workshop. The second training focused on increasing their familiarity and comfort with the camera while also learning to implement photography techniques in the field.

Third Chapter of FACE: Participatory Video & Most Significant Change

And finally, the third chapter of the training focused on Participatory Video & Most Significant Change (PVMSC); a form of monitoring & evaluation which employs participatory video as a documenting tool that communities learn to apply themselves. It also gives a great opportunity to showcase successes narrated by the communities themselves, only with technical support by Communications Professionals. Participants were trained on the theory, process and application of PVMSC and the various stages in a programme lifecycle that it can be employed as a technique.

Videography & Editing

Further to this, participants were also trained in filming & editing techniques, so they are able to shoot and edit videos on their own. The idea is then for these participants to go into their respective field areas and impart the same knowledge to local communities so they are able to become part of this process and are able to document change from their perspective.

Training Modules

The modules were informed by White Rice's collective expertise in the corporate & development communication landscape and were designed keeping in view the globally accepted methods of developing communications, and all the necessary prerequisites that accompany it. As a follow-up training session, it was also important to take into account the participants' previous work, and focus especially on developing their skill-set with the camera before moving to Participatory Video & Most Significant Change.
